Voters' Importance Shown in Elections

By VINCENT THOMAS
 Assemblyman, 68th District

A convincing demonstration of the importance of the voter in our California legislative procedures was a spectacular feature of our recent primary election. Shot down by a heavy barrage of negative votes was a proposed $270 million bond issue for new state construction. This rejection by the voters may necessitate some overtime work by your legislators.

This possibility arises because of an unusual complication in the $2.9 billion budget for 1962-63 which was finally passed after much struggling earlier this year. As enacted, the budget bill provided for use of some $141 million during the year for capital outlay from the bond construction fund.

However, only $52 million is left in that fund. The remaining $89 million needed to carry out the budget program would, it was anticipated, be obtained from sale of part of the $270 million new issue. So now that it has been defeated, the state is confronted by a budget for next year which will be considerably out of balance unless some corrective action is quickly taken.

OBVIOUSLY, the projects planned cannot be undertaken unless money is available. The administration has stated that they will not be started unless financing is legally available. Therefore, all lines of possible action are being intensively explored. Cutting back the building program, or raising taxes to provide needed funds to keep it going, are two alternatives neither of which is pleasant to contemplate.

The need for the buildings to be constructed from these funds is regarded in administrative and other circles as acute. The state colleges anticipate a jump in enrollment of 8,500 students by next year. More than $60 million of bond funds were allocated to these colleges in the budget. The university expects 4,500 more students, and was allocated $52 million from bond funds. Junior colleges not under direct state control were to be granted $20 million toward the cost of their construction. New correctional facilities for adults and youths would require $21 million, and facilities for mental hygiene, $4 million from bond funds. All these construction programs are threatened by the deficit in the bond construction fund so unexpectedly created by the voters.

IMMEDIATELY it became apparent that this bond issue would not pass, the governor asked his director of finance to study the impact of this loss of potential revenues on next year's budget, and the advisability of calling a special session of the legislature to deal with the problem. It was indicated that several days would be taken to make decisions, but it is possible that such a session may have been called before you read this.

One suggestion advanced was that the special session pass another bond issue to be put on the November general election ballot for consideration of the voters. Such action would require a two-thirds vote by both legislative houses. Since this is election year for state officials, the problems of securing necessary votes in the assembly should be readily apparent.

THE SITUATION thus created is certainly unique in California legislative history. This is the first time proceeds of a bond issue not yet approved by voters have been counted on to balance a budget. It is also the first time the voters have been given the opportunity to create a budget problem by their own action, but they certainly took advantage of it.

The constitutional and legal situation seems clear. The governor can reduce the program to fit the $52 million available. Legislative action is required to reach any other solution to the problem. You can be certain that in working one out, we will be fully conscious that the voters did reject this particular bond issue.

commercials you would welcome in your own home, and keep a firmer hand on the advertising agencies, which have the limited mission of selling products.

Agencies and sponsors don't have the sense of public responsibility or the regard for the public intelligence you presumably have, because you, not they, were granted licenses to use the public air waves.

YOU SEE, I'm not convinced you're all morons who decry the public as idiots. I just suspect you allow the importunities of the corporate jungle to cloud your own personal values. So if you can't refrain from exposing us to such bad taste, at least try to practice your occult art in greater moderation.

For a start let's recess the gastro-intestinal school of TV advertising, and let's list all deodorants that guarantee serenity and social success in the U.S. Pharmacopoeia, to be had on prescription only.
